THE SUCCESSFUL GOLF DANCE.

The golf dance given in the Town Hall on Saturday evening was the most brilliant event of the season. The committee on decorations of which Mrs. Frank Bott was chairman, assisted by Mrs. J. Q. A. Brackett and Mrs. Taft, gave especial mention for the artistic display they made of the hall. Streamers, radiating from the ceiling above, reached almost every point of the walls, while the happy combination of color gave to the room a pleasing effect. The ushers were William T. Foster, J. G. Brackett, Horace Hardy and Harold Rice. The gentlemen, in full dress, with their brilliantly colored sashes were at their best. The ladies were dressed tastefully, as they always are. Their outing suits of white with red and blue, were entirely becoming.

The hall was brilliantly illuminated by the electric light, thanks to Mr. Larson. Upon the wall back of the stage appeared the word "Welcome" and "1900." In front of the gallery was the "Happy New Year" for everybody. With the many couples upon the floor engaged in the waltz and other dances, the scene was especially unique and attractive. Poole's orchestra gave out its most enlivening music.

The solo dance by Mr. Chute of Dorchester was a taking feature of the programme. Mr. Chute is graceful in every movement, and he well understands that that is latest in "tripping the light fantastic toe." The fancy dance, in which were the Misses Spur, Miss Florence Hicks, Miss Helen Taft, Monroe Hill, W. H. Francis, Roger Homer and Harold Yeames, was an elegant performance of the terpsichorean art. This dance was enthusiastically received by the lookers on. Refreshments were served during the evening by Carter Hardy. In the anteroom were tables for waiters.

Among those present were the following from Arlington:

THE YEAR 1900.

On Monday morning of this week we began the last year of the nineteenth century, in spite of what the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott says to the contrary. The reverend doctor may be all right in his theology, but it is very evident that he is all wrong in his arithmetic. While we give hearty welcome to 1900, it is with no little regret that we drop the "19" from our date line. All that we have attempted or accomplished in life has been attempted or accomplished with the numerals "18" hovering over us with a "God bless you." While it may be possible, as an enthusiastic friend writes us, one who never fails to see the rainbow and the silver lining in the cloud, that we shall live to see the year 2000 ushered in, still this possibility causes us in no way to lessen our affection for the eighteen hundreds. I look back upon the past in sure to give us renewed strength and hope for the future. The years that are gone make up our bank of deposit, from which we draw at sight. The past is our background in the picture. The foreground must have an appropriate setting if it is to reveal and bring out the future with all its grand possibilities. While far as the activities of life are concerned we have only to do with the now of the to-morrow, yet the years left behind must prove a stepping stone for a long reach forward. We have gained an impetus from the life gone; if that life has been living, which cannot fail to help us to loftier heights, and to that grand and ever-widening vision which happens in more and more of "God's in-measurable universe." Never let us far lose our hold upon the past that shall surely lessen our grip upon the future. We mortals at our best need all the backing we can get. We need both an impelling and propelling force in every advance movement we may attempt to make. One cannot separate the past from the now and the future for time in the grand and final reckoning is to be considered a unit. So though in spite of the eighteen hundreds having become antedated in all business computation, still they are ours, and they must have their proper place where the balance sheet is made up.

What magnificent achievements have we accomplished in this nineteenth century now on its last run! The telephone, steam communication, the electric light, and a thousand other inventions and discoveries which give promise and prophecy to the nineteen hundreds. It doesn't matter what worlds we may have discovered, there are still worlds beyond to be discovered. The universe of God is infinite, so the finite will never be able to accurately measure it. However much we may do there will be still more apparently to do, for as we climb the possibilities our horizon enlarges its circle. So the year 1900 comes to us with ample opportunities for solving so far as we may be able the problem of life. While we seize upon this late date in the calendar of time with alacrity, we shall not be at fault in giving now and then a look backward that we may more definitely estimate our "forward, march."

"GOLF PLAYING ON SUNDAY."

The Rev. Mr. Gill, pastor of the Unitarian church, in an able and manly way gave on Sunday a negative answer to the question, "Shall golf playing on a Sunday be legalized by the state of Massachusetts?" Mr. Gill has kindly assented to our request that we publish what he so well said, so his sermon may be read in another column of this issue, and we are sure that it will be read with much interest and with many hearty amen. We believe with Mr. Gill from start to finish in his decided "no" to the golf question, which is likely to come before the state legislature this present session. While we are a good deal liberal in what may be termed a proper observance of the Sabbath, yet we are persuaded that there should be a becoming respect shown the day. If golf is to be allowed on Sunday, then we say with Mr. Gill that base ball and other field sports should be allowed. But it is not our purpose to write an editorials on this topic upon what may be or may not be proper outings or sports for Sunday. Our only desire is that the Rev. Mr. Gill's sermon on Sunday morning on the question which will soon be presented to the state legislature shall be read by every man, woman and child in Arlington. Our response to the sermon is, as we have already hinted, an under-scored Methodist amen.

SOUTH AFRICA.

South Africa is just now an especially interesting locality upon the maps. So far a genial sky and delightful and picture-que surroundings are concerned it is much to be desired. Its mountains give a magnificent background to the picture it presents. South Africa has told wealth buried beneath its surface. It abounds in iron ore, coal, copper, silver, and uncoined wealth in the mines of gold and its more than a hundred acres of diamonds. Within the past twenty-five years it has yielded more diamonds than the remaining portion of the entire earth has produced in the past two hundred years, and besides it is now yielding $10,000,000 worth of gold each year. It has a fertile soil, where may be grown side by side the products of the tropics and those of our more northern latitude. Unfortunately the country has no large rivers and streams and no forests. Rain in that country but seldom falls, so that the cultivation of the fields must largely depend upon irrigation. What is known is the South African Republic is regarded by the Boers as the dearest spot on earth, and this affords the chief reason why the Boers are fighting for their life in defence of the home they love so intensely. It is a common saying among the Boers that he who has resided for any length of time in South Africa cannot well live elsewhere. For one, one will if need be lay down his life. And this is just what the Boers are doing.

AN INSTRUCTIVE SERVICE.

We regret that we have unwittingly made it appear in these columns that the Sunday evening services at the Baptist church are the only free services to be had for our town's people. It was known to us at the time of our writing, that these had been held in St. John's Episcopal church for many months, and is now being held, free Sunday evening gospel services. But somehow in our enthusiastic zeal that our Baptist brethren had inaugurated such service, we for the moment forgot all about the good work Mr. Yeames is doing for the town through his Sunday evening meetings. We beg a thousand pardons for so inexcusable forgetfulness. A free gospel can be heard on Sunday evening at St. John's Episcopal church. We availed ourselves of the privilege of listening to the Rev. Mr. Yeames on last Sunday evening in elucidation of the Lord's prayer.

On Sunday evening previous to the last the rector discussed the establishment of God's kingdom on earth. On last Sunday evening Mr. Yeames had at his text, "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Mr. Yeames emphasized the thought that something more was implied in his text than submission to or acquiescence in God's will, he declared that it meant as well, positive, aggressive work in doing the supreme will. The series of sermons that Mr. Yeames is preaching upon the Lord's prayer cannot fail to help one to a clearer and more intelligent understanding of the same. The St. John's Episcopal church and society are doing excellent and helpful work for the young people of Arlington through these Sunday evening services.

WINTER HAS COME.

Winter has come sure enough, in spite of the "thin corn husks." Don't take too much stock in signs, but bank your house, put on your storm doors and be ready for the cold weather which is bound sooner or later to come. Well, the clear winter weather is delightful after all. Who is the man or woman who does not enjoy the music of theleigh bells? And where is the boy or girl who does not become enthusiastic in coasting on the single sled or doubleunner? Whittier must have enjoyed the winter months as few others did, otherwise he never could have written "Snow Bound." The outward world never appears more picturesque and attractive than she does when gowned in spotless white and mirrored by icy landscape rivulet. The snow of Monday came in season to give welcome to the new year. Now out with your 2μ trotter and your light going cutter, and so well robed, make the best time of record.

The winter months, if rightly interpreted, make up the social, neighborly portion of the year, and particularly in this so in the country. What indescribable pleasure it affords one at this season of the year to sit of an evening by the open fire and chat with the friend who lives just across the way! And who is he who does not enjoy a tramp through the woods when the ground is covered with snow—everything so clean and still! And then what an artistic display this lighting makes! We wonder if any one of those who went to their mail on Sunday morning failed to see and admire those post office windows with paintings so wonderfully artistic and beautiful that no artist would dare attempt to reproduce them on canvas.

The truth is, each season seems the best and most to be desired as it comes in its turn. Nature is always at her best, so that every real lover of sky and earth of wood and field, of the mountain and the lake, and of whatever else makes up the material world, is ever ready to sing her praises.

NOT AN ALARMIST.

While we are not an alarmist, still we are among those who are crying a halt in our high-pressure system of educational work. Edward Bok, in his article in the January number of the Ladies' Home Journal, headed "A National Vision at the feet of Americans," says that "conservative medical men who have given their lives to the study of children place the number whose health is shattered by over-study at more than fifty thousand each year." In this country alone it is remembered. During the last school term, Mr. Bok writes, "over sixteen thousand children in five cities, between the ages of eight and fourteen, were taken out of our public schools because their nervous systems were wrecked and their minds were incapable of going on any further in the infernal cramming system which exists in our public schools." And then the writer adds that "these sixteen thousand little wrecks are simply the children we know about." "It is cramming, cramming, cramming," says Mr. Bok, adding that "the poor children are compelled to carry home a pile of books to study, usually after supper, and just before going to bed, and that is about the most barbarous part of the whole system." Now we have neither time nor space to reproduce in any large way what Mr. Bok has to say about the wholesale cramming process in our public schools. Do you, fathers and mothers, earnestly beseech of you, get the January number of the Ladies' Home Journal and read the article to which we refer. You owe this much to yourselves and to your children.

While we are interested in our public schools at large, we are especially interested in the public schools of Arlington, and chiefly for two reasons: namely: In the first place, we are now a citizen of Arlington, and in the second place, we have those most closely related to us who are to be educated in the Arlington public schools. So, pray, why shouldn't we be interested? We only repeat what we have frequently written, that we have an excellent opinion of our present corps of teachers from Supt. Sutcliffe down through the whole list. But they are under this high-pressure system and cramming process, so that they have but little choice in the matter. We are glad, however, to say that Supt. Sutcliffe readily recognizes the glaring faults in the educational demands of the hour, and he will prove himself one of the very first in helping to bring about such a reform in school work as shall save the children.

This school pressure increases as the pupil is advanced through the grades, so that its culmination is reached in the high school, which stands in rank next to the college. Although Harvard and other similar institutions of learning may demand much of one who is to enter their classes, still in spite of this fact there should be some way of making less and more tolerable the work in our public schools, and especially the work in our high school grades. Lengthen if need be the term of years in the high so that the pupil may fit for the college in a more reasonable and less anxious way. There is no law compelling our boys to graduate from the college at the age of 21, and our girls at the age of 18. And then again, but a small percentage of those who enter the high school ever become pupils in a higher institution of learning, so why should Harvard or any other college thus manifestly press and bear down upon our under schools? Whatever may be the facts in the case, something needs to be done to save physically the children, and to save the teachers as well; for under our present system of instruction, many a teacher becomes a physical wreck. Driven to death to do almost impossible work in a given time, no wonder that the instructor sometimes becomes impatient and irritable, and at last nervously prostrated in this machine work to grind out a class in a given time.

A parent said to us the other day substantially the following: "My daughter, naturally a sweet tempered and patient girl, I now find anxious and irritable under her burden of studies." Another said, "my daughter rises at 5 to 6 o'clock in the morning to take up her school work," and she added, "I am anxious for her." And then there are pupils right here in Arlington who feel compelled to appropriate a portion of Sunday for their studies, so as to be ready for the class room on Monday morning. Now do not let it be said that we are unfavorably criticizing our teachers. We are simply coming to their defense, they are faithfully performing their duties as prescribed them by higher authority. In personal conversation with leading members of our school board we find the feeling with them is that our school system should be made over anew in many ways, so that the individuality and health of both teacher and pupil should be preserved. The teachers and school board, so far as we can learn, are all right on this subject of sensibly educating the children.

All we need to bring about a reformation in our public school system, is an intelligent and aroused public opinion upon all matters of educational importance. God has assigned no duty to be performed by man, woman or child to which he has not assigned ample time for the execution of that duty. Let us be sensible in all things, and let us begin now. Read, we ask again, Edward Bok's article.

AN EXCELLENT CHOICE.

The Republican members of our state legislature have made an excellent choice in their selection of speaker. The Hon. James J. Myers has had successful experience as a legislator, and well understands all that belongs to parliamentary proceedings. He is also a man, with lots of good common sense. Speaker Myers will bring new honors to the distinguished office he is to fill.

One of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed in the Catholic church of Boston and vicinity occurred on Monday morning at the opening of the new year. For the first time in the history of the Boston archdiocese, probably also in the history of the nation, Catholic prelates offered up the sacrifice of the mass as the clock was striking the midnight hour. In and around Boston probably two hundred thousand worshippers of the Catholic faith participated in religious exercises at midnight. In the principal Catholic churches throughout the world, the closing year of the twentieth century was ushered in with the same religious observance. This observance was in accordance with the expressed desire of Pope Leo XIII., that the Catholic world would open the last year of the century, and, a year later, the opening year of the twentieth century with the midnight mass. The midnight service on Monday morning has peculiar significance to Roman Catholics. It marks the opening hour, not only of the new year, but a year of jubilee in thanksgiving for the blessing of God bestowed on his people during the hundred years just elapsing.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Who said an open winter?

Governor Crane's inaugural is a business-like state paper.

Start the new year bright, and subscribe for the Enterprise.

This bright winter weather with it brings about a revival in business.

Mayor Hart became the official head of Boston on Monday. His inaugural was a business paper, full of common sense.

The city governments have started in with many new heads. It will be a wise thing if some of our towns elect new heads in March.

Several of the Boston papers on Monday gave, through their reporters, generous space to the Rev. Mr. Gill's sermon of Sunday upon Sunday golf playing.

The saying that the sun never sets on the British possessions is explained by the Boers by declaring that "God could not trust that nation in the dark." Meanwhile old Sol is setting regularly on the Transvaal.

If there is a boy or girl in our public schools who doesn't thoroughly understand that we are still living in the nineteenth century, then such a one should learn over again his count of hundred.

ARLINGTON NEWS.

Universalist fair, Jan. 17-18.

1900 came in with winter in earnest.

January 7, first Sunday after the Epiphany.

Don't forget the A. V. F. A. ball next Friday evening.

Old Eu-eka was rolled into her new quarters on Thursday evening.

When you wish your piano tuned call up Mr. Larrows; he is thoroughly reliable.

Mr. George W. Kent is building a large house at Newton corner, for Mr. W. O. Evans.

Both of Mr. P. T. Hendrick's little daughters, May and Annie, are very sick with diphtheria.

The snow-plows were promptly on hand Monday morning, making walking on the sidewalks possible.

The Arlington Woman's club held their annual meeting on Thursday evening of next week in the Town hall.

The W. R. C., No. 11, will install its officers on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Lunch is to be served.

Owing to the severe cold and fall of snow, work had to be temporarily suspended on St. Malachy's church.

The W. W. will hold a food sale this afternoon in the vestry of the Unitarian church from 2 till 5 o'clock.

At the Young Men's club, Tuesday evening, Rev. James Yeames will address the club on parliamentary law.

Don't forget that Prof. Bendix will teach your child music in a thorough manner. He is one of the great masters of today.

A lofty lighthouse with lighted lamp had been placed upon the platform, and furnished a most striking feature of the occasion when nineteen girls with cards bearing the names of as many Christian heroes, one for each century, brought them forward to be placed on the front face of the lighthouse. In his address, the pastor, Rev. S. C. Bushnell, related incidents connected with the lives of several of the saints, such as Polycarp, Perpetua, Agastus, Chrysostom, Gregory, and the rest, continuing his unfinished address at the young people's meeting in the evening. The singing and recitations by the children were unusually good. An informal concert followed, owing to the presence of Mr. William E. Wood, organist of the Baptist church, who took the opportunity of trying the new instrument, much to the satisfaction of those who turned to hear him play.

In spite of the snow storm, there was a large company assembled for the Christmas party at the Baptist church on New Year's night. The children were much in evidence, even the little ones surmounting the snow barrier, with fun and refreshments ahead. Superintendent was master of ceremonies and put forth as his musical programme a piano duet by Miss Annabel Parke and Mr. Harold Wood, and three beautiful Christmas carols rendered by the chorus of the new Sunday evening service. Mr. E. Nelson Blake was the presenter, and read in very realistic style a new selection, entitled "Christmas in the Klondike." It mingled the comical and the pathetic in that rough miner life somewhat in the fashion of Bret Harte. The next number was a series of about a half-dozen comic recitations rendered by Mr. Vernon Field of Chelsea. They were imminently funny and kept the company in a roar. And besides being funny, they were in good taste and in keeping with the occasion. Mr. Field is capital in dialect—especially in the Italian and negro, and seems to relish the fun himself. The closing number was a sleight-of-hand performance by Mr. Edward James, an amateur from Boston. It was one of the most graceful, skillful and clean-cut exhibitions of this craft ever given in Arlington. He went very sure-footed through some of the most mysterious tricks of the Herrmanns and Hindoos, and left absolutely no tracks behind him. Then came a swarm of waitresses and everybody was soon eating ice-cream and cake, and then the merry distribution of the Christmas bags of goodies preceded a rather late dismissal for the children. Still, as it comes but once a year, no one thought much about it. It was one of the happiest occasions of the kind the Baptists ever had.

There was another large audience assembled at the people's evening service at the Baptist church on Sunday. The chorus rendered a selection beautifully appropriate to the closing year, and the pastor's theme was an emphasis upon the common experience at such time, that is, of "taking stock." It is, he claimed, a time for taking moral stock as well as material. He spoke plainly of the strange obliviousness to moral values at other times. Hoarding of everything that stands for power or that promises it begins early, but opportunities for moral increase easily slip away. Elsewhere we carefully plan and provide against shrinkage of values, and our commonest proverbs bind up all the ills for the accumulation of capital in kill, strength, money. Grit for self is plenty, but grit for God is scarce. The text was Rev. iii. 2, "Strengthen the things which remain," and had food for comfort and courage in it, because it met the need of "watch night," by giving just the assurance that is most welcome, that is, that the most precious values were not entirely gone. More than one virtue remains to be strengthened no matter how nearly dead it may be. If no one sin ever stands alone, neither does one virtue ever stand alone. O to realize that it is moral power that is so easily leaving us, and that we are drifting away from God! The last passing hours of the old year are full to that realization, and the questions they push upon us are these: How much gained? How much gone? How much lost? There is no stagnancy in morals. Every man is moving. Which way? A year ago I was a better man, or a worse—which? In this scripture it is love that speaks, as in every one; for it is God that speaks. It is against the nature of human love to despair. Many a man slipping from his best and then from himself, has been helped to the new grip by the love of his wife that never in the darkest hour would do anything but hope. Does God's love faint easier than her's? No; it is not only a Father's, but a wife's and mother's as well. It is the all-inclusive love. Moody the great preacher believed that, and it was the secret of his great power with those who had the least left to strengthen. Witness the five hundred in East London, thieves, harlots, prostitutes of every sort, broken up by his message not of reproof, but of love most tender, and pleading to be led back to the father through the son. You may have little left, God knows. But he loves most who has most forgiven. Here is the strange, sweet gospel, that the least worthy may hope the most. Soon strikes the midnight hour. God grant that the watchman's call in the distant city may have deeper meaning for us tonight than for him: "Twelve o'clock, and all is well!"
